BREWERS' PAST FOUR SEASONS — MEMORABLE & SUCCESSFUL!

By Dennis Sell

When Bud Selig introduced Harry Dalton to the Milwaukee media as the team's new Executive Vice President — General Manager on a cool, gray November day in 1977, even the optimistic Brewer President could not have envisioned the success which the franchise would achieve during the next four seasons.

After all, the 1977 Milwaukee Brewers had just completed their third consecutive 90-loss season. Furthermore, the Brewers had never won more than 76 games or finished closer to the .500 mark than ten under (76-86), both of which occurred in 1974.

When Rollie Fingers, the "Mustachioed Marvel," struck the Tigers' Lou Whitaker last October 3 to give Milwaukee the second half crown, it climaxed a remarkable four season run for the Brewers. As shown in the chart on page four, the Brew Crew has compiled the fourth best record (336-258, .566) in baseball during the four season, 1978-1981 period. Milwaukee twice eclipsed the 90-win mark with 93 victories in 1978 and 95 in 1979.

Unfortunately, two of the three teams with better records, the Yankees and Orioles, reside in the A.L. East with the Brewers, a division generally considered to be the toughest and most competitive in major league baseball.

It all began so innocently and quietly on that day in November, 1977. Harry Dalton waited almost two months before selecting George Bamberger, a pitching coach for Baltimore and an unknown in Milwaukee, as field manager. Bamberger, soon to be affectionately known as "Bambi," would become the most popular manager in Milwaukee baseball history.

Brewer fans were given a hint of things to come on opening weekend of 1978. Playing against Bambi's former team, the Orioles, Milwaukee belted grand slam home runs in each of the three games to establish a new league record. Sixto Lezcano, Gorman Thomas and Cecil Cooper did the honors in helping the Brewers to a trio of lopsided wins — 11-3, 16-3 and 13-5. During that same homestand, Moose Haas etched his name in the Brewer record books by fanning 14 Yankees.

Success did not come as easily, however, in the next two months. On June 7, 1978, the Brewers were mired in fifth place with a 26-26 mark. Milwaukee then proceeded to reel off 10 straight wins as visions of George Webb's hamburgers danced in the fans' heads. Still, there were doubts about the true capabilities of the team.

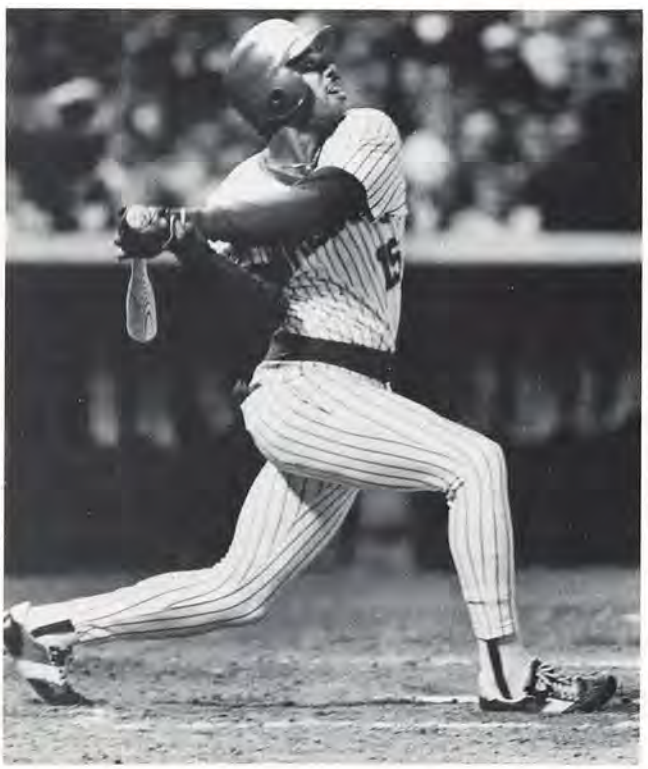
These doubts were all but erased during a split five game series against the Defending World Champion Yankees. In their wildest imagination, the 39,283 loyalists in County Stadium for a twinight doubleheader against New York that Wednesday, June 28, could not have foreseen what would take place. Sparked by a three-run Ben Oglivie homer, Mike Caldwell shut out the Bronx Bombers, 5-0, in game one. With the Brewers on their way to a win in game two and a sweep, the boisterous throng began chanting "Augie! Augie! Augie!" in spurring Jerry Augustine to a 7-2 victory.

As if this weren't enough, the Brewers swept a three game weekend series in County Stadium 10 days later. Ron Guidry, sporting a perfect 13-0 mark, led his team into Milwaukee on July 7 and came away with his first loss. Two mammoth homers by Larry Hisle backed a four-hitter by Mike Caldwell. With Milwaukee trailing by a run in the eighth on Saturday evening, Larry Hisle belted a Rich Gossage fastball into the right field bleachers with a man on base for a 6-5 win. The Brewers then completed the sweep with an 8-4 victory the following afternoon.

Success followed success after this. Attendance soared as the Brewers sold out an August series against Boston in advance. The Brewers' high-powered offense continued as their sluggers were nicknamed "Bambi's Bombers," a tribute to their home run prowess. Sales of "Bambi's Bombers" and "Brewer Fever-Catch It" T-shirts multiplied. When the '78 season closed, the Brewers had won 93 and lost 69, a 26 game improvement over the 67-95 record in 1977.

The three seasons following 1978 were to bring even greater accomplishments. Memorable games and performances — enough to fill a scrapbook — became the rule.

Memorable games? How about Cecil Cooper's three homers against the Yankees on July 27, 1979, the last of



JULY 27, 1979 — Cecil Cooper's three home runs vs New York

SEPTEMBER 29, 1979 — Gorman Thomas hit his 45th home run as he ran away with the A.L. Home Run Title

JUNE 28, 1978 — Mike Caldwell blanked the Yankees, 5-0, the first of his three shutouts vs New York that season which was hit in the bottom of the 9th off "Goose" Gossage to win the game! Could a scriptwriter have woven a more dramatic plot than the 1980 home opener when Sixto Lezcano's bases loaded homer into the bullpen in the last of the ninth defeated Boston and thrilled 53,313 delirious fans! Perhaps you prefer Robin Yount's clutch two-out ninth inning homer in Tiger Stadium off Jack Morris in late September, 1981. Robin literally snatched a win from the jaws of defeat, and that swing of the bat was likely the biggest moment in the Brewers' pennant drive. How about Sal Bando's clutch performances down the stretch last season!

Awards? The Brewers have enough to occupy a trophy case. Just to name a few, start with Rollie Fingers' 1981 feats — Cy Young Award, Most Valuable Player, Fireman of the Year and Wisconsin Sports Personality of the Year. Mike Caldwell was a member of the All League Team in 1978; he topped the majors with 23 complete games and was named A.L. Comeback Player of the Year. Cecil Cooper won Gold Gloves in 1979 and 1980 and was named to the All League team. Coop had batting averages of .312, .308, .352 and .320. He led the majors in RBI's in 1980 with 122. Paul Molitor was named 1978 A.L. Rookie of the Year by The Sporting News and Baseball Digest. Gorman Thomas won the 1979 A.L. Home Run Crown with 45. In 1980, Ben Oglivie tied Reggie Jackson for the league homer title with 41. Robin Yount led the majors with 39 doubles and 82 extra base hits in 1980. The Sporting News named George Bamberger Manager of the Year in 1978, while UPI named Bud Selig Executive of the Year that same season, and there were more.

The Milwaukee Brewers led the majors in home runs during the four year period, as shown in the accompanying chart. In 1980, their 203 home runs, 2535 total bases and .448 slugging percentage were tops. In 1979 and 1980, three Brewer players surpassed the 100 mark in RBI's for the first time since the 1948-49 Boston Red Sox. In 1979, it was Thomas (123), Cooper (106), and Lezcano (101), while 1980 saw Cooper (122), Oglivie (118) and Thomas (100) accomplish this feat.

No discussion of the Brewer success story would be complete without mention of Harry Dalton's judicious trades. Dalton's acquisition of Ben Oglivie for the 1978 season was followed three years later by the now famous trade with St. Louis. Think of where the Brewers might have been in 1981 without Rollie Fingers 28 saves and 1.04 earned run average, Pete Vuckovich's 14 wins and Ted Simmons' 12 game winning RBI's.

County Stadium attendance soared as Brewer Fever raged throughout the city and state. The 1,601,406 total of 1978 was followed by 1,918,343 in 1979 and 1,857,408 in 1980. Had not the continuity of the 1981 season been interrupted, 2,000,000 fans would likely have passed through the turnstiles.

During this time, County Stadium crowds developed an atmosphere all their own. From the pre-game tailgate parties, fans streamed into County Stadium to watch Gorman Thomas make his diving belly flop catches and clout home runs. They cheered Cecil Cooper as he literally laced line drives from any pitch thrown. They joyously observed the spirited Paul Molitor steal a base with a head first slide. The fans admired Robin Yount, with the grace of an antelope going deep into the hole at short to throw out would be base runners, and yelled as Ben Oglivie swung from the heels to belt homers.

Fans raced to paste banners on the bleacher walls — "Paul the Fantastic 4," "Gorman's Storm Troopers," "Gantner's Group," "Coooooop," "Rockin' Robin." Youngsters in their Brewer hats. Superfan Bruce diving over the tarpaulin on the third base side to spear another foul ball. "Bambi's Bombers" T-shirts. A beer and a bratwurst. Organist Frank Charles' rendition of "Roll Out The Barrell." George Bamberger enjoying a beer with the fans at Ray Jackson's. "Tenth Innings" at Ray Jackson's, Derry's, Saz' and a score of other spots in Milwaukee — "If only we had bunted, "Why didn't Bambi pull the pitcher?," "We'll get 'em tomorrow," "Wait 'till next year."

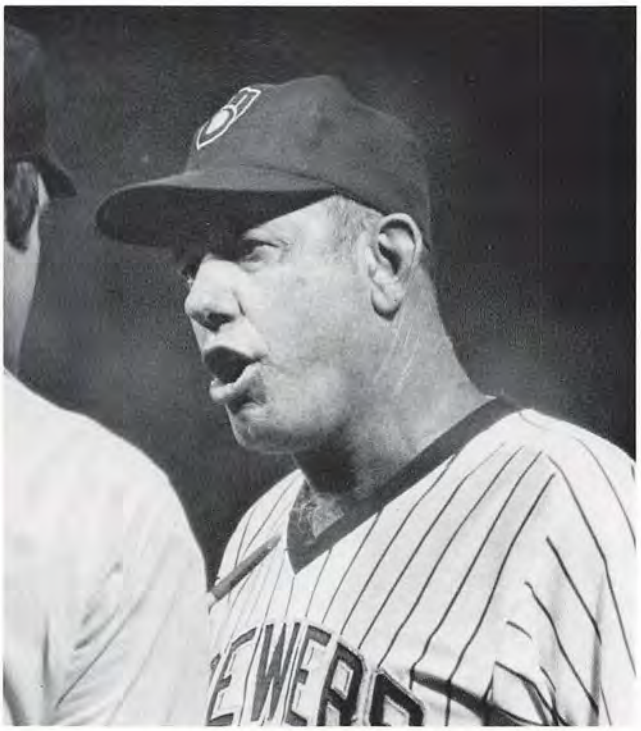
SEPTEMBER, 1981 — Robin Yount hit .316 the final month of the year to spark Milwaukee to it's first post-season berth in the club's 12 year history. His three run, two out homer in Detroit September 15, 1981, could have been "The Shot Heard 'Round The World" for Brewer Fans

No one can take these fond memories and recollections away for they are as much a part of baseball as the game itself.

The Brewer teams of 1978, 1979, 1980 and 1981 possessed a certain charisma and appeal with which fans could identify. Many players became household words around Milwaukee and Wisconsin. Perhaps the continuity and stability of the team along with their success were responsible. Fourteen players, a remarkably high total, were with the Brewers all four years. The fourteen were (alphabetically) as follows — Jerry Augustine, Sal Bando, Mike Caldwell, Cecil Cooper, Jim Gantner, Moose Haas, Larry Hisle, Bob McClure, Paul Molitor, Don Money, Charlie Moore, Ben Oglivie, Gorman Thomas and Robin Yount.

Trades and retirements are a part of baseball. A popular Sixto Lezcano and Lary Sorensen depart, but Rollie Fingers, Pete Vuckovich and Ted Simmons take their place. A respected Sal Bando reaches the end of the line.

So many magic and memorable moments have taken place during the last four years. The vision of Lou Whitaker swinging and missing at a Rollie Fingers' delivery last October 3, Ted Simmons raising his fist in a triumphant salute and then jumping into Fingers' arms, the Brewers' players mobbing one another, the fans streaming onto the field and the smile on Bud Selig's face during the clubhouse celebration will remain and be joined by those of other clutch performaces and memorable games. As Bud Selig proudly declared — "This is only the beginning!"



OCTOBER, 1978 — George Bamberger was named 'Manager of the Year' by UPI & The Sporting News

ROLLIE FINGERS — A CLOSE LOOK AT AN AMAZIN' SEASON

(Editor's Note: Rollie Fingers had what many people considered the finest year a pitcher could possibly have in 1981. Not only were his individual achievements remarkable, but his success — in direct proportion to the club's was even more amazing. With the addition of Fingers to fill their biggest need last season, the Brewers compiled the best overall record in the Eastern Division and participated in the playoffs for the first time in their twelve year history. Fingers compiled a 6-3 mark and a 1.04 ERA to go along with his major league-leading 28 saves, meaning he was directly responsible for fifty five per cent of Milwaukee's victories. The Brewers were 34-3, a .919 winning mark in games he saved or earned a decision in, and they were 40-7, an .851 winning percentage, in games he appeared in. Considering the circumstances, he did indeed have a remarkable season, perhaps the finest of any pitcher in baseball. With that in mind, this article goes back and relives some of the highlights of his amazing year.)

APRIL

Based on his initial month's performance, no one could have foreseen the success Rollie Fingers was to have in 1981. While the Brewers finish with a 9-7 record in April, Fingers was 0-1 with one save in seven appearances, as Milwaukee was only 4-3 in the games he appears in. After earning a save and a loss in his first two games, he worked 13.1 shutout innings in his last five outings of the month, as he compiles a 0.53 ERA based on one run in 17 innings.

APRIL 11 in CLEVELAND — Rollie Fingers makes his first appearance as a Brewer with one out in the eighth inning and Milwaukee leading 4-3. He immediately gives up a single to Joe Charboneau, a double to Toby Harrah and an intentional walk to Jorge Orta to load the bases. However, pinch-hitter Ron Hassey hit into a double play to end the inning and Fingers worked a perfect ninth, getting Miguel Dilone on a called third strike to earn his first save as a Brewer.

APRIL 15 in CHICAGO — With the score tied at 4-4, Fingers enters the game in the seventh inning with runners on first and second. He got Carlton Fisk to pop out while attempting to bunt; got Greg Luzinski on a deep fly to center and fans Chet Lemon. The White Sox then score in the next frame on a single, two messed up bunts and Bob Molinaro's pinch-hit sacrifice fly, handing Rollie his initial loss as a Brewer.

APRIL 28 in MILWAUKEE — This game was a typical early season performance for Fingers. His 4.1 innings of work was his longest of the year, but he came out empty handed — coming in in the ninth and leaving in the 13th — as the Brewer bats were silent. He didn't allow a run in his outing, but Milwaukee drops a 14 inning, 5-0 loss to Toronto.

MAY

Rollie starts to roll this month, as he saves eight games and won one, being involved in half of Milwaukee's wins in May. He was 1-1 with 18 strikeouts in 17.1 innings, his best monthly strikeout ratio of the year. Ironically, his 2.60 ERA was his worst mark of the year for the month, which gives you some idea of the kind of season he had.

MAY 15 in MILWAUKEE — Fingers allows a lead-off single in the ninth inning and then retired three straight Oakland hitters to give Pete Vuckovich a 3-0 win. The save was his fifth of the year, but it was his first save as a Brewer at County Stadium, a place where he stood out the entire season.

MAY 29 in BOSTON — Making his first appearance in Fenway Park since 1976, Fingers earns his first win as a Brewer in one of his poorer outings. He enters the game in the eighth inning with Milwaukee leading, 3-2, and Jim Rice on second base. After getting the second out of the frame, he gives up a two run homer to Joe Rudi, giving the Red Sox a 4-3 lead. Ted Simmons' two run homer in the ninth gives Fingers another chance, though, and Rollie retires the side in order. It is his first Brewer win and his first American League victory since October 2, 1976.

JUNE

Fingers appears in only three of Milwaukee's ten games in June, but the results were predictable, earning three saves.

JUNE 11 in MILWAUKEE — Rollie works two perfect innings, finally retiring Pat Putnam on a grounder to Cecil Cooper to save a win for Pete Vuckovich. The save — his 12th of the year — enables Vuckovich to tie a club record, since it was his eighth consecutive win. The 6-3 victory was also the club's final game of the first half. Fingers finishes the first half with a 1-2 record; 12 saves and a 1.34 ERA, as the Brewers had a 17-6 record, a .739 winning mark, in Rollie's 23 appearances.

AUGUST

Although it didn't start that way, it was indeed another fine month for Rollie. After getting a no-decision in his first outing, he saves eight and wins one game in his final nine appearances of the month. After allowing a run in that initial outing, he works 14 scoreless frames the rest of the month to finish with a 0.60 ERA. Since Milwaukee was 13-9, he is involved in 69 per cent of the club's wins.

AUGUST 16 in TORONTO — Rollie allows only one hit in 1.2 innings earning a save, as the Brewers beat Toronto, 6-2. In the second game he follows suit and saves his second game, a 3-0 shutout, as he runs his save total to 15. Those two saves are the most by a Brewer since Bill Castro had 13 in 1977.

AUGUST 22 in MILWAUKEE — Rollie earns his second win of the year by working two perfect innings, as Ted Simmons RBI single in the bottom of the tenth gives the Brewers a 4-3 victory over the Twins. The victory is Fingers' first as a Brewer at County Stadium.

SEPTEMBER-OCTOBER

The man was outstanding down the stretch, coming on to run up a 4-1 record, a 0.79 ERA and eight saves, as he is involved in 12 of the 18 Brewer victories — 67 per cent. In 12 of his last 13 outings he either wins or saves the game for Milwaukee, as he was a key performer when it counts. He finished the second half with a 5-1 record, 16 saves and a 0.72 ERA, as he is involved in 21 of the Brewers' 31 wins — 68 per cent!

SEPTEMBER 3 in MINNESOTA — Rollie worked 1.1 innings to earn his 21st save of the year, the most saves by a Brewer pitcher since Tom Murphy recorded 20 in 1975.

SEPTEMBER 25 in DETROIT — Rollie Fingers works a scoreless ninth inning, as he saves his 27th game for the Brewers. Robin Yount's three run homer in the top of the ninth brought the club back from behind and Fingers' save of the 8-6 win might have been the second most important win in the club's history.

OCTOBER 3 in MILWAUKEE — A one-and-two pitch fanned Lou Whitaker and gives Rollie Fingers his sixth win of the year. But more importantly, it gives Milwaukee a 2-1 win over Detroit and the second half championship, the most important victory in the franchise's 12 year history. Rollie was almost perfect at home in 1981, with 12 saves, two wins and a 0.25 ERA, based on one run in 36.2 innings, an amazing feat.

THE PLAYOFFS

OCTOBER 9 in NEW YORK — Rollie works three innings of relief, his longest stint since May 24, as the Brewers beat the Yankees, 5-3. Fingers earns the win, Milwaukee's first ever in playoff competition.

OCTOBER 10 in NEW YORK — With two outs and Yankees on first and third, a tired Fingers reaches back and fans Rick Cerone to give the Brewers a 2-1 win over New York to even the series at two games apiece.

ALLAN H. "BUD" SELIG

President & Chief Executive Officer

The date will remain forever in his mind. October 3, 1981. Rollie Fingers had just struck out Detroit's Lou Whitaker to give the Milwaukee Brewers their first title ever!

Bud Selig's Milwaukee Brewers. No doubt, Brewer fans everywhere rejoiced, but none more so than the boss himself. Finally, after 12 years of hard work, Selig could now say with pride that his team was a champion.

"It was a long time in coming, but it's still very sweet," was Selig's reaction after being given the customary champagne shower in the Brewer clubhouse. After the Brewers battled back from a two-games-to-none deficit to tie the Division Series with New York, before losing the fifth and final game, Selig still had reason to be proud of his team's efforts.

The Brewers' President and Chief Executive Officer started organizing his efforts to build a championship team for Milwaukee as far back as 1964 when the Braves decided to pack up and leave. Selig and "The Brewers", an organization which was formed to try and return major league baseball back to Milwaukee, were successful initially, arranging for the Chicago White Sox to play several games at County Stadium in 1968.

Selig's efforts were finally rewarded on April 1, 1970. A Seattle bankruptcy court awarded the Seattle franchise to Selig and his investors and major league baseball was back in Milwaukee after a four year absence.

After struggling at the beginning, slowly the pieces began falling into place. First Sal Bando signed with the Brewers in the initial Re-entry Draft, bringing immediate respectability to the club. Then the following year Larry Hisle was signed and two days later Selig added Harry Dalton to his staff as Executive Vice President — General Manager. The rest is familiar to baseball fans, as the Brewers have become one of the game's top teams the past four years.

Baseball experts honored Selig for his efforts as he was named 1978's Major League Executive of the Year by the United Press International, the most prestigious award a front office executive can earn. In February of 1981 he was honored as the B'nai B'rith Foundation and received the International B'nai B'rith Sportsman of the Year Award for his contributions to the world of sports.

HARRY DALTON

Executive Vice President — General Manager

One could forgive Harry Dalton if he sat back and smiled when the Brewers made the playoffs for the first time in their 12 year history last season. Milwaukee's clinching 2-1 victory over Detroit at County Stadium on October 3 was significant for the club's Executive Vice President — General Manager in many ways.

First of all, he saw the Brewers make the playoffs in only his fourth year at the helm, having come to Milwaukee on November 20, 1977.

Secondly, the club's 62-47 record was the best in the Eastern Division in 1981, and it gave the Brewers an overall record of 336 victories and 258 losses in the past four years — the third best record in the American League and the fourth best mark in the majors in that span.

Finally, the three players who came to Milwaukee in what is now known simply as "The Trade" — Rollie Fingers, Pete Vuckovich and Ted Simmons — all played a key role in that victory, as they had the entire season.

Vuckovich, who finished the year with the American League's top winning percentage (.778) and a 14-4 record, allowed only one run in six and two thirds innings of work, as the Brewers battled the Tigers down the wire. Then there was Simmons, getting two hits and the game-tying run batted in, as he keyed the attack, finishing the year with 14 home runs and 61 runs batted in, including a team high 12 game winning runs batted in. Finally, there was Fingers, adding his sixth win of the year in addition to his major league-leading 28 saves.

Those were the most visible signs of Dalton's presence, but they were just the most recent in a long line of deals through his career. Add the names Roy Howell, Ben Oglivie, Randy Lerch, Mark Brouhard, Gorman Thomas, Jim Slaton and Jamie Easterly to the list of players Dalton has brought to Milwaukee.

While Dalton has earned many awards during his 29 year career in baseball — Major League Executive of the Year in 1970 with Baltimore and General Manager of the Year in 1978, his initial year in Milwaukee — the on-the-field performances of his teams is a testimony to his work. His teams in Baltimore won four American League pennants and two World Championships in his six years as Vice President of Player Personnel. One of his finest moves was acquiring Frank Robinson, recent Hall of Famer, who went on to become the only player to ever win the MVP in both leagues.

BOB "BUCK" RODGERS
Manager

For the first time in the twelve year history of the club, the Brewers made the playoffs. For the first time in the twelve year history of the club, the Brewers had the best record in the Eastern Division. For the first time in the twelve year history of the club, the Brewers had Bob "Buck" Rodgers as the manager.

Without a doubt, the latter had something to do with the first two developments.

In 1981 Rodgers took over a club that was picked by the "experts" to win the Eastern Division before the first pitch was thrown in spring training. "The Trade" with St. Louis that brought Rollie Fingers, Ted Simmons and Pete Vuckovich to Milwaukee made the pre-season prediction more convincing.

In the end, the Brewers did finish with the best record in the Eastern Division (62-47, a .569 winning percentage) and they did make the playoffs for the first time in their twelve year history. But in the end, it was Rodgers who had as much to do with the club's success as anyone.

Cecil Cooper, Gorman Thomas and Jim Gantner were consistent all year. Ted Simmons and Ben Oglivie had some big RBI's. Robin Yount was tremendous in the field.

Vuckovich and Fingers had brilliant seasons, but Rodgers had to juggle the rest of the pitching staff, getting good performances from different people when it counted — down the stretch.

But what won the second half championship for Milwaukee were fundamentals and execution: two elements that were stressed when Rodgers took control back in the spring — a bunt here, moving a runner over there, and an excellent handling of the bullpen in the pennant drive.

"The most important thing about winning ballgames is not being selfish," Rodgers said. "Everyone on the team has to sacrifice something at sometime — giving themselves up. Although baseball is more of an individual game than other sports, you still need a good amount of teamwork if you're going to win ballgames. Our guys did that when it counted last year."

At age 43 with a year of managing under his belt, Rodgers is one of the younger managers in the big leagues. Although it was his first year as Milwaukee field boss, Rodgers was familiar to Brewer fans having been "Acting" Manager when George Bamberger had his heart problems. He compiled a .557 winning mark as a substitute for Bambi, putting together a 39-31 record.

"Looking back, I don't think my philosophies have really changed," Rodgers said. "They've been built up over a period of time. What I've learned is the result of many years of playing and coaching."

Rodgers' playing career began with six seasons in the Detroit minor league system. He got his big break when the Los Angeles (now California) Angels tabbed him in the 1960 expansion draft.

A Delaware, Ohio native, Rodgers was a hit as an Angel, spending his career with them before retiring in 1969. An excellent defensive catcher, who knew how to handle a pitching staff, Rodgers caught 155 games his rookie year, a record for a first year receiver. His efforts with California paid off, as he was later named to the All-Time Angels Team.

He managed Salinas in the California League in 1975 and El Paso in the Texas League two years later, winning the title with the latter club. He was scheduled to manage Salt Lake City in the Pacific Coast League in 1978, when Dalton asked him to become Milwaukee's third base coach, a position he accepted.

Rodgers, who has also coached with the San Francisco Giants and Minnesota Twins, compiled a respectable .537 winning mark in the minors — 145 victories and 125 losses. However, one of his biggest thrills came during the winter of 1976-77 when he led Licey to the Dominican Republic Championship and then went on to sweep all six playoff games to capture the overall Caribbean Title in winter ball.

Rodgers, an adhesive salesman on the West Coast where he lives with his wife, Judy, and daughters, Lori, Lisa, Jan and Jill, hopes to benefit from his first year managerial experience.

THE COACHES

Harvey Kuenn

Harry Warner

Cal McLish

Ron Hansen

Larry Haney

There are many words that would describe Manager Bob (Buck) Rodgers' coaching staff in 1982. Experienced and qualified are two that come to mind.

The dean of the bunch is Harvey Kuenn, who is entering his 11th season as batting coach. Cal McLish starting year number seven here as one of the most respected pitching coaches in the game. Larry Haney is beginning his fifth season tutoring the pitchers and catchers in the bullpen, while "youngsters" (in experience here) Ron Hansen and Harry Warner are only in their second full year of directing traffic at first and third base, respectively.

The American League's Rookie of the Year in 1953 with the Detroit Tigers, Kuenn has had a long history of baseball success. But he is known more for being a local product. He was born in West Allis and was an outstanding athlete at Wisconsin Lutheran High School. He later played both baseball and basketball at the University of Wisconsin before deciding on the Tigers.

He won the coveted American League batting crown in 1959 with a .353 mark, contributing to his lifetime .303 average in 15 major league seasons. "Arch" played in one World Series with the Tigers and also was selected to no less than seven All-Star teams.

Calvin Coolidge Julius Caesar Tuskahoma McLish joined the staff under previous manager Alex Grammas, and his credentials and performance have kept him around.

Cal, a gutsy righthander, spent 21 seasons as a professional pitcher, including 15 in the majors. The Oklahoma native had his best years in 1958 and '59 with the Cleveland Indians. First, he posted a 16-8 record with a 2.99 ERA and then followed that up with a 19-8, 3.68 mark. For his efforts, he was named to the American League All-Star team in 1959.

McLish is now in his 17th season as a major league pitching coach, having also worked in Philadelphia and Montreal in the National League. Now 56, he pitched his first game in the majors at age 19, without having spent a day in the minors.

Don't be surprised if you see number 12 actually go into a game and catch. Larry Haney does it in practice and is still in playing shape. The 39 year old Charlottesville, Virginia, native gained a reputation as being one of the game's finest defensive catchers during his career.

Besides playing five years in Oakland, he also had stints with St. Louis and San Diego.

But fans may remember his ties to his current ballclub. First, he played in 22 games for the Seattle Pilots in 1969, and later he returned to the organization and played 63 games for the Brewers in 1977. He retired to become bullpen coach under George Bamberger the following year, but still caught four games under emergency duty in September of 1978.

The 12-year major league veteran committed only 29 errors in his career, good for an outstanding. 984 fielding mark.

Hansen was initially called in for "emergency" duty also, when Bambi had heart surgery and Kuenn had a leg amputated in 1980.

After spending eight years out of the game as an insurance adjustor, he was pleased with the chance to return to baseball when he became the Brewers' first base coach and infield instructor in April, 1980.

He retired from the game as an active player in 1972. Setting many fielding records during his 15-year career as shortstop playing with five American League teams.

He was the league's Rookie of the Year and an All-Star in 1960 and made a rare unassisted triple play while with Washington on July 30, 1968.

The newest coach in time spent with the Brewers is also the most professionally experienced. Warner, 53, took over at third base last spring training.

Now in the 36th year in professional baseball, both on the field and in the dugout, Warner started his career off the field as manager of Erie of the New York-Penn League at 32, leading his team to the title in 1960. Then he spent 17 years managing clubs on every minor league level in the Minnesota-Washington organization, earning three more titles along the way.

He made it to the majors as a coach with the Toronto Blue Jays in 1977 and was even named acting manager of the Jays for a short span in 1978 in relief of Roy Hartsfield. He returned to the minor league managing ranks with Toronto's AAA farm club in Syracuse in 1980 before coming to Milwaukee.

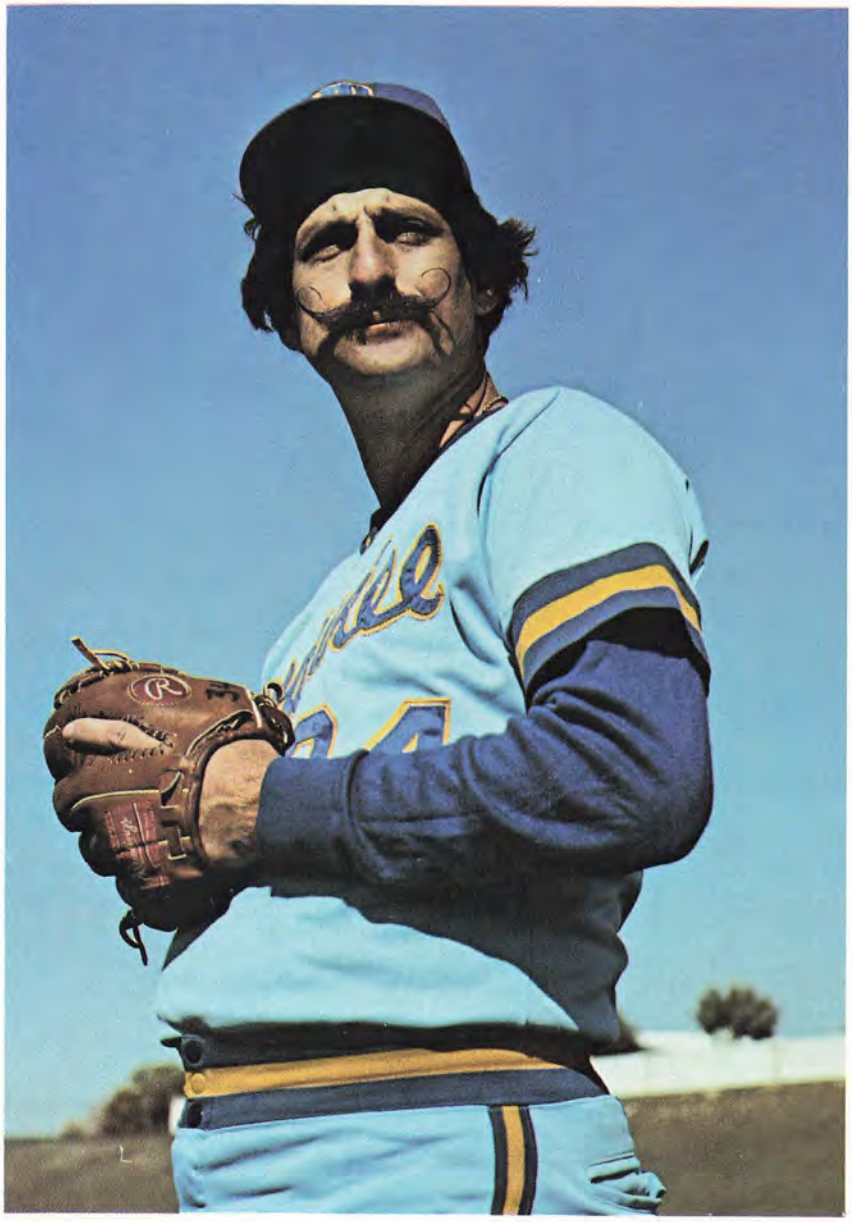
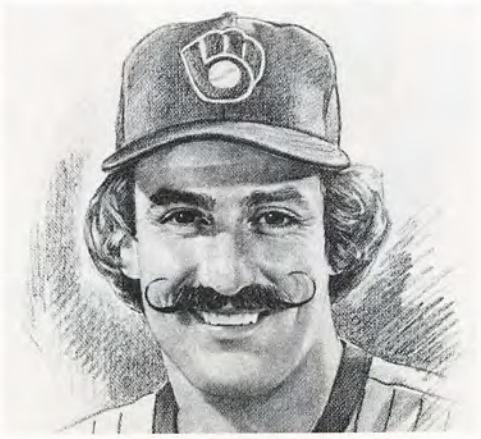
* Led League





A Favorite Flashback — Saturday, October 3, 1981

The Brewers were leading the second place Detroit Tigers, 2-1, with two outs in the ninth inning and Lou Whitaker at the plate. A victory would clinch the second half title for Milwaukee, giving the Brewers their first playoff berth in the franchise's twelve year history. Rollie Fingers, the mustachioed marvel, reached back and fired a two strike pitch past a swinging Whitaker and 28,330 fans joined the Brewers in a wild celebration.

At one point during the winter, it seemed as if Rollie Fingers earned as many awards as he did saves during the 1981 season. Besides earning both major relief awards — from Rolaids & The Sporting News — Rollie also became the first relief pitcher to earn the Cy Young Award & Most Valuable Player Award in the same season.

The 35 year old Fingers, who also earned the American League's Joe Cronin Award for distinguished service, topped the big leagues with 28 saves. He was 6-3 with a 1.04 ERA, including an outstanding second half of the season with a 5-1 mark, 0.72 ERA and a 16 save performance.

Fingers was nearly flawless at County Stadium last year, allowing only one run in 36.2 innings, while not allowing any of the twelve runners on base when he entered the game to score.

Milwaukee was 34-3 in games he saved or earned a decision, a .919 winning percentage, while they were 40-7 in games he appeared in, an .851 winning mark.

Rollie, the major league all-time leader with 272 saves, is now third on the all-time list with 100 victories as a reliever. An avid golfer, he lives with his wife, Danielle, in LaMesa, California.

The game was tied at 5-5 and Goose Gossage had easily retired the first two batters in the bottom of the ninth inning before 47,928 screaming fans at County Stadium. Cecil Cooper, who had earlier slammed a solo homer off Ed Figueroa and a two run homer off Ron Davis, stepped to the plate. He fell behind in the count, one ball and two strikes, before stroking a Gossage fastball deep into the rightfield bleachers. His third homer of the day gave Milwaukee a 6-5 win over New York in one of the most exciting games in Brewer history.

One of the top performers in baseball today, Cecil Cooper continues to speak softly and carry a big stick. A career .307 hitter, "Coop" hit the ball at a .368 clip in the second half of 1981 to finish at the .320 mark, making him the top lefthanded hitter in the majors.

One of the leaders on this veteran Brewer squad, Cecil is one of the game's finest hitters. For the second time in the past three years he topped the major leagues in doubles, tying Bill Buckner of the Cubs for the honor with 35 two baggers.

A clutch performer, Cooper had 11 game winning runs batted in, as he excelled in batting with runners on base. He not only hit .338 in that latter situation, but he batted .329 with men in scoring position and a remarkable .390 batting with the score tied or a chance to tie the score.

He earned American League honors as Player of the Month for August, an award he is familiar with, as he was a key performer in the team's pennant drive.

A native Texan, Cecil now makes his home in a Milwaukee suburb with his wife, Octavia, and daughter Kelly.

17 JIM GANTNER

A Favorite Flashback — Saturday, October 10, 1981

Trailing two games to one in the Eastern Division Series, the Brewers were leading the Yankees, 2-1, before 52,077 screaming New York fans. With Larry Milbourne on first, Rick Cerone singled to leftfield and the Yankees looked like they had a big seventh inning in mind. Milbourne went to third on the hit, but Cerone got trapped in a rundown between first and second. Jim Gantner, having an outstanding year in his initial season as a starter, then pulled off the play of the game. Milbourne strayed too far off third base as Gantner ran Cerone back to first. Seeing Milbourne out of the corner of his eye, Gantner whirled and threw to Robin Yount covering third base and nailed the Yankee runner, the potential tying run, the second out of the inning. Jim Slaton then retired the final batter to end the inning and the Brewers went on to even the series at two games apiece.

One of the major reasons the Brewers topped the major leagues with 135 double plays in 1981, Jim Gantner proved management correct when they made him a starter. A defensive whiz, "Gumby" led all regular second baseman by participating in 95 double plays and with 613 total chances.

Jim, 28, his wife, Sue, and their daughters, Jamie and Sarah, live in Hales Corners, Wisconsin. Gantner, a native of Eden, Wisconsin, was outstanding on the diamond for the University of Wisconsin — Oshkosh.

Gantner, recipient of the club's "Unsung Hero Award" in 1980, also performed well at the plate, hitting .294 with men on base last year. Although he is known for his defense, his career .271 batting mark shows he is no slouch at the plate.

A Favorite Flashback — Sunday, May 24, 1981

The Red Sox were batting in the top of the fourth inning of a scoreless tie. Tony Perez was on first base when Joe Rudi drilled a ball deep into left centerfield. Centerfielder Gorman Thomas, his back to the plate, raced after the ball and made a back-handed catch at the warning track. He then whirled and threw to the cutoff man, who in turn doubled off Perez at first. Thomas, who also threw out a runner at home in the first inning, had a key bunt single in the 14th inning, and three hits, including a three run homer in the nightcap, as the Brewers swept Boston, 2-1, and 10-7.

One of the most popular players on the club, "Stormin Gorman" returns to centerfield in 1982. The American League's most prolific home run hitter the past four seasons with 136, Gorman has only Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt with 145 home runs ahead of him in that span.

The powerful Thomas, a native of Charleston, South Carolina, is the Brewers' all-time home run leader with 158. He has averaged 34 home runs per season since 1978 when he became a regular.

1981 was perhaps his finest all-around season, as he ranked among the American League leaders in doubles, walks, runs batted in, total bases and slugging, as well as home runs. His .259 batting average was 31 points higher than his career mark.

Gorman, the only Brewer to ever hit 20 or more homers in four consecutive seasons, holds the club record for consecutive games played with 243.

Gorman and his wife, Debbie, have a daughter, Kelly. Thomas has many interests, including hunting, fishing, music, golf and billiards.

19 ROBIN YOUNT

A Favorite Flashback — Friday, September 25, 1981

Trailing the Tigers, 6-5, with two outs in the ninth inning and Jack Morris, their ace righthander on the mound, the Brewers found themselves on the verge of falling two and one half games behind in the Eastern Division Division race with only eight left to play. Milwaukee had runners of first and second when Robin Yount stepped to the plate. Yount, having fanned twice and popped up twice earlier in the game against Morris, then drilled a 1-1 pitch into the leftfield bleachers, giving Milwaukee an 8-6 win. That victory might have been the biggest in the club's 12 year history, as it pulled the Brewers within one half game of the top and sparked them down the stretch as they won the second half championship and made the playoffs for the first time in the history of the franchise.

Already an eight year veteran at the age of 26, Robin Yount continues to show improvement in every phase of his game. In 1981 he was the major league's top fielding shortstop, compiling a .985 fielding percentage. The Brewers led the major leagues with 135 double plays and Yount and Second Baseman Jim Gantner were two of the reasons.

He showed what he was made of down the stretch, as he hit in 13 of his final 14 games, including a season high 12 game hitting streak that saw him hit .438 in that span.

Despite his age, Robin is the Brewers' all-time leader in games, at bats, hits, doubles and triples, while he ranks a close second in runs, extra base hits and total bases.

An outstanding golfer, Robin also enjoys fishing and motorcycling in his spare time. Although he was born in the midwest, Robin is a Californian now, residing in Thousand Oaks with his wife, Michele, and daughters, Melisa Ann, and Amy Mae.

A Favorite Flashback — Friday, May 29, 1981

Ted Simmons was making his first appearance in Boston's famed Fenway Park and getting his first look at the "Green Monster" in leftfield. The Red Sox had taken a 4-3 lead when Joe Rudi homered off Rollie Fingers in the bottom of the eighth inning, lofting a shot onto the screen above the leftfield wall. Ben Oglivie was on first with one out, when Simmons stepped to the plate in the ninth. He lofted a home run off the light tower above the "Green Monster" in left, his second homer in two days, giving Milwaukee and Fingers a come-from-behind 5-4 win.

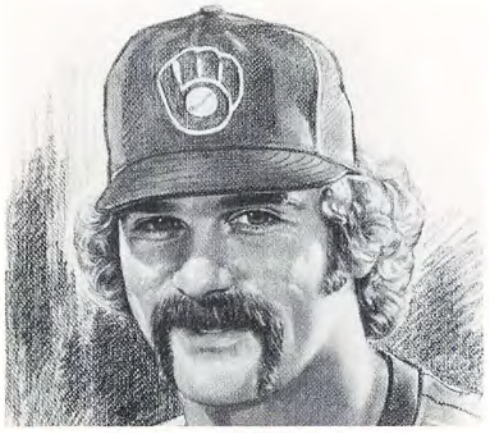
Ted Simmons proved to be a valuable addition to the Brewers behind the plate as well as with the bat. He was a steady influence on the pitching staff throughout the year, but especially in the pennant drive.

Always a clutch performer at the plate, Simmons had five game winning runs batted in in the final month of the year, as he drove in a team high 25 runs in that span. In fact, his 12 game winning RBI not only led the Brewers, but ranked third in the American League.

A career .293 hitter, Simmon batted .348 against the Orioles, .310 against the Royals and .300 against the Angels in his first season in the American League.

Simba ranked second on the Brewers with 14 homers, trailing only Gorman Thomas(21). He was third on the squad with 61 RBI's, trailing Ben Oglivie(72) and Thomas(65). Power is his business, as he holds the National League record with 172 home runs by a switch-hitter.

Born in Highland Park, Michigan, Simmons resides in St. Louis, Missouri. Ted and his wife, Maryanne, have two sons: John and Matthew.



50 PETE VUCKOVICH

A Favorite Flashback — Saturday, October 10, 1981

In perhaps the most courageous performance of the season, Pete Vuckovich climbed out of sick bed to beat the Yankees in New York and even the Eastern Division Series at two games apiece on this day. Shaking off a 103-degree temperature only three days before, Vuckovich, having missed the first three games of the series, was still a doubtful starter until the Brewers arrived at the park the morning of the game. He fought off the effects of the flu for most of the game, allowing only two hits and no earned runs in five plus innings of work, as his valiant effort sparked Milwaukee to a thrilling 2-1 victory.

In his initial season as a Brewer, Pete Vuckovich was named the club's Most Valuable Starting Pitcher and one look at his numbers explains why. He not only had the best record on the team — 14-4 — but his .778 winning percentage was the best in the American League.

"Vuke" tied Mike Caldwell's record early in the year winning eight straight games and he set a Brewer mark by compiling a 6-0 record in the month of May. He also had tremendous success at County Stadium where he was 8-1 with a 1.84 ERA in ten games and he matched that record under the lights.

Peter, his wife, Anna, and their sons, Lazo, and Pete, Jr., became a part of the local community when he signed with the Brewers, buying a home in Hales Corners, Wisconsin. A native of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, Pete also spends some time in nearby Conemaugh in the off-season.

Vuckovich has a career record of 67-47, a .588 winning percentage. He has been even more impressive in the American League, compiling a .636 winning mark base on a 28-16 record.

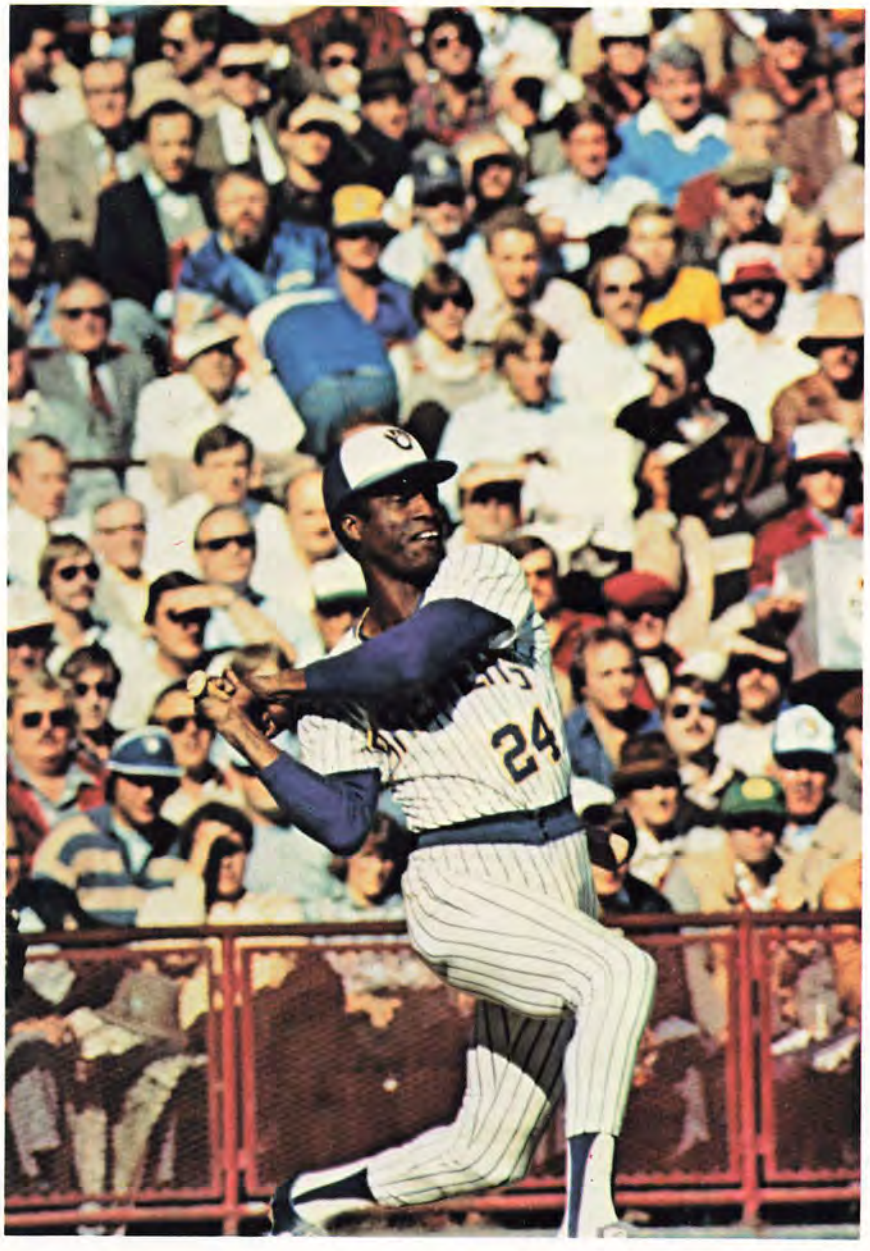
† Tied for the League Lead



A Favorite Flashback — Sunday, July 8, 1979

Ben Oglivie not only sparked Milwaukee to a sweep of a doubleheader over the Tigers on this day, he also wrote his name in the club record book. Benji homered his first time up in the third inning off Jack Billingham. He duplicated his solo shot in the sixth inning off lefthander John Hiller, giving the Brewers a 3-2 lead. Then with two outs and Don Money at third base, he drilled a Hiller pitch deep into the right centerfield bleachers, giving Milwaukee a 5-2 lead and an eventual 5-4 win. His three homers and 12 total bases in a game are a club record, shared with Cecil Cooper. He also doubled in a run in the nightcap, in a 3-1 win.

Known as "The Spiderman" because of his wiry physique, the Brewer leftfielder gives Milwaukee a potent one-two combination from the left side of the plate along with Cecil Cooper.

Whether drilling line drives to all corners of the field or stroking towering home runs, Benji is one of the key members of the Milwaukee batting order. The club's top RBI man in 1981 with 72, Oglivie also drove in 11 game winners, tied for fourth in the American League. A clutch performer again last season, the native of Panama batted .337 with men in scoring position.

An American League All-Star in 1980 when he was the co-home run champion with Reggie Jackson, each with 41 homers, Ben hopes to return to the batting form that gave him a .286 average as a Brewer, 10 points higher than his career mark.

An outstanding athlete while growing up in New York, Benji has settled in Mesa, Arizona, a warmer climate much more to his liking. He and his wife, Tami, have a daughter, Trianna, and a son, Benjamin.

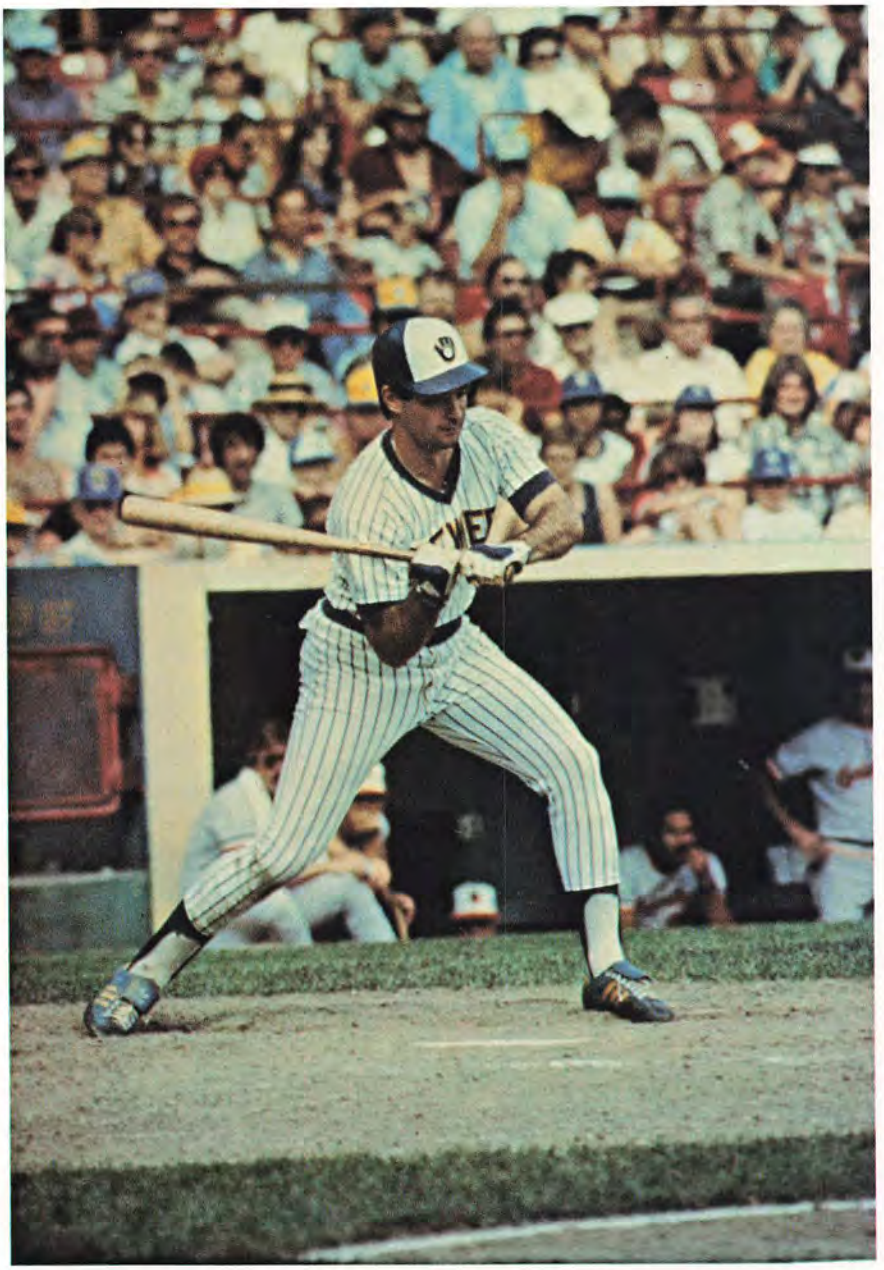
Playing in only his second major league game, Paul Molitor, the Brewers' rookie shortstop who was filling in for an injured Robin Yount, had a field day as the Brewers bombed the Orioles, 16-3, for the second straight day. Molitor singled in the first off Dennis Martinez; hit his first major league homer a three run shot - off Joe Kerrigan in the fourth; and added a two run single off Tippy Martinez in the fifth. He finished the day with three hits in six at bats, including two singles and a homer, two runs scored and five runs batted in. Not bad for a youngster with 64 minor league games and one big league contest under his belt.



Without a doubt one of the most exciting players in the big leagues today, Paul Molitor makes things happen. Whether at the plate, in the field or on the basepaths, "Molly" is the key to the Brewer attack in his lead-off position.

Although he is only a four year veteran, the multi-talented Molitor is already among the Brewer career leaders in seven categories, his highest ranking being second in stolen bases (107) and batting average (.296).

A player who excels against the toughest competition, Paul has also performed well in the clutch, proving so once again in 1981 when he hit .325 with men on base.

Molitor and his new bride, Linda, live in Mequon, Wisconsin. One of the most popular players on the team, Paul spends part of his off-season working with the Brewers' Speakers Bureau.

A Favorite Flashback — Wednesday, April 12, 1978

A 21 year old righthander, Moose Haas, wrote his name in the Brewer record book on this day, a record that still stands. Before a friendly County Stadium audience, Haas struck out a club record 14 batters, as the Brewers handed the Yankees, a 5-3 defeat. The Brewer righthander struck out at least one Yankee every inning, including Reggie Jackson four straight times. Haas allowed only five hits - none after the fourth inning - as he pitched one of the best games of his career.

This 26 year old righthander is a five year veteran and a mainstay on the Brewer starting staff. Moose not only had his best winning percentage (11-7, .611), but he showed he was a rugged competitor, as he won some important games in the pennant drive last year.

He was perfect in August, chalking up a 3-0 mark and his six victories in the second half of the season tied him with Pete Vuckovich for the club high, while his five complete games were the best on the staff. In addition, Moose was flawless during the day a year ago, posting a 4-0 record.

He has come into his own over the last three seasons, averaging 13 wins, nine complete games and 102 strikeouts per year. A hard thrower, Moose ranks in seven of a possible ten categories on the Brewer All-Time Top Ten Pitching List, including third with 459 strikeouts.

Haas and his wife, Diana, reside in Hampstead, Maryland in the off-season, where Moose practices two of his favorite pasttimes — magic and locksmithing. He also holds a black belt in Tae Kwon Do.

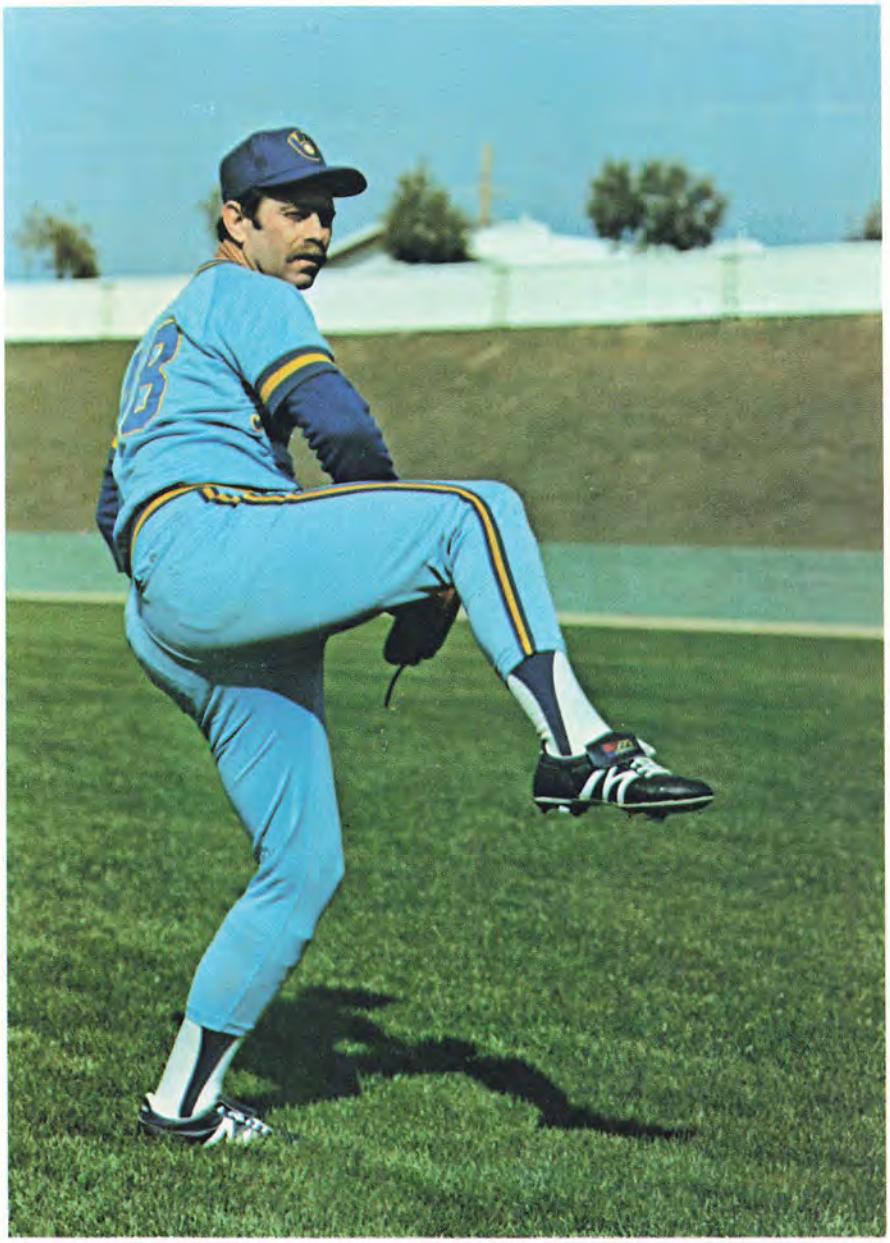
Reggie Jackson stood at the plate with two outs in the ninth inning, as 26,682 fans screamed for "REG-GIE" to come through. A tired Mike Caldwell stood on the mound, staring at the Yankee slugger and then wound up and made him his tenth strikeout victim of the night. The win was Caldwell's twentieth, making him only the second Brewer pitcher to accomplish such a feat. It was a 2-0 shutout, his sixth whitewash of the year, a club record, and the third time that season he blanked the Bronx Bombers.



One of the most competitive members of the Milwaukee Brewers, Mike Caldwell is the battle-worn veteran of the pitching staff. Since coming to Milwaukee in 1977, "Iron Mike" has been one of the key members of the staff, ranking in nine of the ten categories on the club's all-time pitching list.

The 33 year old lefthander ranks second on the team with 55 complete games, 67 victories, 12 shutouts and a .609 winning percentage, trailing Jim Slaton in the first three and Pete Vuckovich in the latter. A hard luck hurler in 1981, he suffered losses by 1-0 (twice) and 2-0. He continues to be a Yankee-killer as he has a career mark of 9-2 with a 2.74 ERA against the Bronx Bombers.

Mike, his wife, Lynda, and their son Daniel Michael live in Grafton, Wisconsin. A former MVP in the Atlantic Coast Conference, Caldwell enjoys making model airplanes in his spare time.

A Favorite Flashback — Friday, October 9, 1981

Trailing in the Eastern Division Series, two games to none, with their best pitcher (Pete Vuckovich) unable to perform because of illness, the Brewers turned to Randy Lerch. Lerch, a key factor in the pennant drive when he won three of his last four decisions, took the mound in Yankee Stadium before 54,171 hostile New York fans, as Milwaukee was on the brink of elimination. The big lefthander, also suffering from a bout with the flu, allowed only one run in six innings of work, as he pitched the Brewers to a 3-1 lead before leaving in the seventh. Although he didn't get the victory, his courageous performance was the main ingredient in Milwaukee's 5-3 win, their first playoff victory in the club's 12 year history.

There were times last season that Randy showed he could do an outstanding job for the Brewers whether called on as a reliever or as a regular in the starting rotation. He began the year as a flamethrower in relief, retiring 18 of the first 19 batters he faced, finishing April with a 2-0 mark and a 0.64 ERA.

A starter for most of his career, he stepped into the regular rotation and was a key factor in the Brewers' pennant stretch, winning three games in the final weeks of the season. When Pete Vuckovich was out with the flu, he took his place in the third game of the playoffs and pitched the Brewers to the first post-season victory in their history.

Randy, his wife, Janet, and their children, Kristy and Randy, Jr. make their home in Voorhees, New Jersey. A physical fitness buff, Lerch has used martial arts to help his strength and coordination.

A Favorite Flashback — Thursday, April 8, 1976

There were 44,868 fans at County Stadium on Opening Day in 1976 as the Brewers hosted the New York Yankees and their ace hurler, Jim "Catfish" Hunter. Slaton, an 11 game winner the year before and the ace of the current staff, got the starting nod from new manager, Alex Grammas. The 25 year old righthander threw only 112 pitches, as he stopped the Bronx Bombers on four hits and blanked them, 5-0. Five days later he tossed a two-hitter and whitewashed the Tigers before 48,612 fans in Detroit's home opener, winning, 1-0.

It's hard to believe that Jim Slaton is 31 years old, with over ten years big league experience. Nine of those seasons have been spent as an important part of the Brewer pitching staff and 1982 will be no exception.

Slaton moved to the bullpen at the end of last season and played an important role down the stretch and in the playoffs. His versatility will give Manager Buck Rodgers a chance to use him as a short reliever, a middle man or as a spot starter.

Jim's numbers speak for him, as he is the club's all-time leader with 279 games, 261 starts, 69 complete games, 93 wins, 1,796 innings, 832 strikeouts and 19 shutouts.

Last season he had a no-hitter going with two outs in the ninth inning in Minnesota, before Sal Butera singled to leftfield. But success isn't new to "Slates", as he has 110 career wins in the big leagues. Twelve victories over the Indians and Angels top his totals.

A native Californian, he resides in Lancaster, California. A talented athlete, he enjoys golfing and water skiing.

A Favorite Flashback — Saturday, July 8, 1978

The Brewers were trailing the New York Yankees, 5-4, with two outs in the bottom of the eighth inning and Rich (Goose) Gossage was on the mound. Robin Yount was on second with two men out and Larry Hisle was the batter. Earlier in the game Hisle had homered and singled and had driven in two runs. Although first base was open, Gossage instead challenged the soft-spoken Brewer, quickly getting ahead on the count — no balls and two strikes. The flame throwing ace then came in with a fastball and Hisle put it in the rightfield bleachers, giving the Brewers and 46,518 delirious fans a stunning 6-5 win.

For the third year in a row, Larry Hisle has dedicated himself to coming back from a shoulder injury. If hard work and determination have anything to do with his comeback, then the 34 year old Hisle will succeed.

Everyone's All-Star in 1978 when he was the club's Most Valuable Player, Larry is looking to regain the form that saw him hit .290 with 34 homers and 115 runs batted in his initial year in a Milwaukee uniform.

Larry had surgery to remove a bone spur from his right shoulder in June after playing in 27 games.

A return to form by Hisle would give Milwaukee one of the most powerful lineups in baseball. When healthy, he is one of the game's top hitters, especially in clutch situations.

Since coming to Milwaukee in the Re-entry Draft four years ago, Larry, his wife, Sheila, and son, Larry, Jr., have made the Milwaukee area their home.

A Favorite Flashback — Monday, September 28, 1981

Milwaukee's Pete Vuckovich and Boston's Frank Tanana were wrapped up in a scoreless pitcher's duel, each hurler having allowed only three hits. Mark Brouhard, struggling down the stretch at times, stepped to the plate with one out in the bottom of the seventh. Brouhard, a 25 year old outfielder with outstanding promise, slammed a Tanana fastball down the leftfield line, his first homer in four months and Milwaukee moved into first place, one half game ahead of the Detroit Tigers.

One of the most likeable members of the team, Mark Brouhard is also one of those rare players who has the potential to not only hit for power, but for average as well.

Bro nearly captured the Triple Crown in the Double A Texas League in 1979 while at El Paso, when he topped the loop with 28 home runs and 107 RBI, finishing percentage points off the leader with a .350 mark.

Although he saw only limited time in the outfield his rookie season, he proved time and again he was capable of playing in the big leagues when he got the opportunity to perform last season. In 1982, Bro is a candidate to become a regular in rightfield. Only Cecil Cooper and Charlie Moore had better batting averages than Brouhard's .274 mark a year ago and a closer look showed he came through in the clutch.

Mark topped the club with a .367 batting average with men in scoring position. In addition, the burly outfielder hit .326 with men on base and chalked up a 10 game hitting streak in May, a personal high.

Mark and his wife, Jennifer, live in Woodland Hills, California, where he is just as comfortable with a fishing pole in his grip as he is with a bat.

A Favorite Flashback — Thursday, May 28, 1981

The Brewers were trailing the Detroit Tigers, 1-0, in the bottom of the fourth inning at County Stadium and Dan Petry was on the mound for the Bengals. Cecil Cooper had walked and Ben Oglivie and Ted Simmons had singled to load the bases for Roy Howell, the club's new third baseman. Howell fell behind in the count, no balls and one strike, before lacing a low-and inside slider into the bullpen in rightfield. The grand slam was his fourth in the majors and first as a Brewer. Howell later doubled and scored a run in Milwaukee's three run eighth inning, as the Brewers clubbed Detroit, 7-1.

Although he may wear No. 13, that numeral has been anything but unlucky for Roy Howell during his career. Whether playing third base, handling the designated hitter role or coming off the bench like the legendary calvary, Roy has been a welcome addition to the Brewers.

Having come to Milwaukee via the Re-entry Draft last year, the hustling Howell has given the Brewers 100 percent in whatever role Manager Buck Rodgers has asked him to play. Roy has also shown he is a clutch performer, as five of his six homers in 1981 won games for the Brewers, while he held a .329 batting mark when he came to the plate with a chance to tie the score.

Roy and his wife, Karla, were childhood sweethearts, growing up in Lompoc, California. Last summer they welcomed their son Troy as the third member of their family.

A Favorite Flashback — Wednesday, October 1, 1980

Catcher Charlie Moore became only the second Brewer to hit for the cycle on this night, getting a single in the second inning, a home run in the fourth inning, a triple in the sixth inning and a double in the eighth inning, all coming off four different Angel pitchers. Batting ninth in the order, Charlie joined Mike Hegan as the only other Brewer to accomplish such a feat, as he led Milwaukee to a 10-7 win. He added three runs scored, three runs batted in and two stolen bases to his evening's work.

Although he is listed as a catcher, Charlie Moore is that and more to the Brewers. One of the most versatile members of the Brewers, Charlie can also play left and right field or take his turn as an effective designated hitter.

A pesky hitter, Moore batted .301 last season, second best batting average on the Brewer club. He was particularly effective in the first half when he hit .330; at County Stadium where he hit .316; and at night when he batted .333.

Having hit .300 in two of the past three years, Moore is beginning to come into his own. He hammered Oakland pitching at a .500 clip last season, bringing his career average against the A's to .310. He likes Boston pitching the best, however, as his career .315 average attests. He also has a .300 career mark against the Angels.

Charlie, his wife, Lynn, and their sons, Bryan, Chad and Patrick, live in Birmingham, Alabama. A talented athlete, he turned down a chance to play football at Auburn. Moore has shown the past few years he made the correct decision when he picked baseball as a career.

Perhaps no one will be more excited than Bob McClure when the season opens, because if everything works out for the little lefthander, he will find himself as a member of the starting rotation for the first time in his career.

Counted on as a starter last year, McClure sat out most of the year with arm problems, before returning and playing a key role out of the bullpen down the stretch and in the playoffs.

In September of 1980, "Big Mac" made five starts for the Brewers with excellent results. He logged a 4-1 record, including two complete games and a solid 2.41 ERA. In just five seasons in Milwaukee, Mac ranks third with a 3.24 ERA, fourth with 30 saves and fifth with 204 appearances on the Brewer All-Time Top Ten Pitching List.

Without a doubt, the hard-throwing lefthander could be an important key to the Brewers' success this season. Bob, his wife, Jody, and son, Jacob, make their home in Walnut Creek, California. Mac enjoys playing cards, hunting and fishing when he's not on the mound.

A Favorite Flashback — Monday, September 1, 1980

After 212 relief appearances in the major leagues, Bob McClure got a chance to start his first game — and he made the most of it. "Big Mac" tossed a 6-hit, complete game victory over the Royals, his former teammates, in Kansas City and sparked Milwaukee to a 6-1 victory.

An important part of the Milwaukee bullpen last season, Jamie was the club's top southpaw in relief in 1981, his initial year in the American League.

He ranked second on the club with a 3.19 ERA, 44 appearances and four saves, trailing only Rollie Fingers in all three categories. Usually put into the game in crucial situations, Easterly averaged nearly five strikeouts per nine innings of work — an impressive credential for a reliever. He was the lone Brewer hurler not to surrender a home run in '81.

In the 27 victories Easterly appeared in, he compiled an excellent 1.80 ERA. In the second half he was particularly effective, with a 2.63 ERA. He was especially tough at County Stadium with a 1.96 ERA.

The 30 year old lefthander is a Houston native, who spends his winter months in Crockett, Texas. The bearded, bespeckled hurler should be an important part of the bullpen again in '82.

The Brewers beat Baltimore, 5-1, on the road, moving into first place in the Eastern Division. Jamie Easterly, one of the unsung heroes of 1981 as Milwaukee's "other" reliever, allowed only two hits in four innings of work and earned his fourth save of the year. It was the first time Milwaukee had ever been in first place in September during the Brewers 12 year history.

A Favorite Flashback — Friday, June 24, 1977

With newcomer Sal Bando now at third base, Don Money surprised everyone and became the club's regular second baseman in 1977, proving once again how versatile he was. A holder of several major league defensive records as a third baseman, Money quickly put his name in the record books as a second baseman too. While Lary Sorensen won his first major league game, 7-1 over Seattle at County Stadium, Money cracked the American League mark and tied the major league record with 12 assists as a second baseman.

Don Money will be playing his ninth year as a member of the Milwaukee Brewers in 1982 and his twelfth season overall in the major leagues. It's no surprise that he leads the Brewers all-time list in runs, runs batted in, extra base hits and total bases, while ranking second in games, at bats, hits, doubles and home runs.

Throughout his career, the 34 year old Money has played every infield position for Milwaukee, as well as leftfield, and his versatility should come in handy once again this season.

A clutch hitter throughout his career, he will also get a chance to swing a bat as a designated hitter and a pinch-hitter, being one of the main people coming off the bench.

Don, his wife, Sharon, and children, Don, Jr., and Shannon, spend the off-season in Vineland, New Jersey.

A Favorite Flashback — Sunday, July 17, 1977

With Robin Yount and Don Money out with injuries and Tim Johnson on the disabled list, 19 year old Ed Romero was called up from Holyoke of the Eastern Division to help the Brewers infield situation. Playing in his first major league game, only twelve hours after being called up, Romero slapped three singles and drove in the winning run in a 3-2 win over Baltimore, as fans searched their programs to find out who this rookie was.

Eddie Romero is beginning his second full season as the Milwaukee Brewers number one utility infielder. He is a fine defensive player, especially at second base and shortstop. Eddie didn't commit an error in his final 27 outings last season, handling 89 chances down the stretch.

Romero has come up with some big hits in his brief career, as his 10 runs batted in on 18 hits in 1981 attest. His busiest month was May, when he played in 20 games, mostly at shortstop, in place of the injured Robin Yount. In those games, Eddie drove in nine runs.

He first joined the Brewers in July of 1977 at the tender age of 19. He not only impressed Brewer management with his bat, but also with his glove.

Romero, is wife Ivonne, and son, Eddie, Jr., live in Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico. When he finds time to enjoy his hobbies, Eddie relaxes with his music and movies.

The newest member of the Milwaukee Brewer pitching staff, Mike, who had pitched for the Seattle Mariners the past four seasons, will be used as a spot starter and in relief. Parrott holds Mariner single seasons records with 14 wins, 13 complete games and 229 innings pitched, all set in 1979.

The big righthander split last season as a starter and reliever, snapped a personal losing string of 18 games on May 6 with a 12-1 win over the Brewers in the Kingdome.

Originally selected first by the Baltimore Orioles' organization in the 1973 June Free Agent Draft, Mike was traded to Seattle during the winter of 1977 and ranks in five areas on the Mariners All-Time Pitching List.

Born in Oxnard, California, Mike, his wife, Mindy, and son, Ryan reside in Redmond, Washington. His younger brother, Steve, pitches in the Brewer minor league system. Mike enjoys building and repairing furniture, and oil painting.

This 26 year old receiver gives the Brewers tremendous catching depth once again in 1982. An excellent defensive catcher who excells at calling the game and blocking pitches in the dirt, Ned Yost could see more playing time this season.

Having spent the entire season with the Brewers last year after seeing action in 1980, Yost has displayed surprising power in his limited appearances. Collecting six hits last season, Yost managed to put three balls in the bleachers, including his first two hits.

Ned set personal highs in virtually every offensive department last year. Born in Eureka, California, Ned now resides with his wife Debbie in Pleasonton, California. Along with his regular hobbies like hunting and fishing, Yost also enjoys an unusual pasttime — taxidermy.

There was one out in the third inning and Ned Yost came to the plate in Toronto. It was his third game of the year, but only his first plate appearance. Yost stepped up to the plate and homered off Jackson Todd to break a scoreless tie, sparking the Brewers to a 5-4 victory over the Blue Jays.

Jerry Augustine heard the chants "Augie, Augie, Augie" as he slammed the door on the Yankees this night, 7-2, as the Brewers swept a twinbill from New York, having earlier won the opener, 5-0. The second place Brewers saw Augie scattered seven hits as he won his fourth straight start.

One of three Wisconsin natives on the club's spring training roster, Jerry Augustine is entering his seventh big league season. The Kewaunee native has compiled a 28-23 record the past four seasons, working out of the bullpen the last three years.

The man with the rubber arm should give Milwaukee's bullpen versatility again in 1982, as he is capable of long, middle or short relief, while occasionally spot-starting.

"Augie" currently ranks high in eight of ten possible categories on the Brewers' all-time list. Of pitchers on the current roster, only Jim Slaton has more appearances than Augustine. Jerry is .500 or better against eight of the thirteen American League teams, including New York, as he has defeated the Yankees more than any other team — seven times.

Jerry, his wife, Nancy, and children, Tammy, Todd and Ted live in Hales Corners, Wisconsin. When Jerry is not involved in any outdoor activities in his spare time, you can find him inside reading a good book or strumming a guitar.

Marshall Edwards, playing in centerfield in place of the injured Gorman Thomas, slapped a single, double and triple, stole a base and drove in a pair of runs, leading Pete Vuckovich and the Brewers to a 5-2 win over the Boston Red Sox in Fenway Park.

One of the more popular members on the club, little Marshall Edwards is never without a smile. Used mainly as a pinch-runner and a defensive replacement last season, he was a key part of Manager Buck Rodgers' bench.

After making the big leagues in his seventh professional season, Edwards played his role well, even finishing second on the team in stolen bases despite his limited game action.

He hit .375 with men on base when he had the opportunity, showing his .288 minor league average was no fluke. He also averaged 36 steals in the minors, a talent the Brewers could use.

Marshall, his wife, Alice, and daughter, Adrienne, reside in Los Angeles, California, but they also spend time in Anniston, Alabama, Alice's hometown when they get the chance.

DWAYNE MOSLEY

One of the best in the business, Bob Uecker returns to the Brewer broadcast booth for his eleventh season in 1982. An outstanding speaker, entertainer and humorist, Bob is beginning his third season as the club's No. 1 announcer. Uecker has used the experience and knowledge he acquired as a major league catcher with the Milwaukee Braves, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia Phillies to bring him national acclaim. He has an outstanding list of credentials, which include his duties with ABC's Monday Night Baseball, the League Championship Series and the World Series. "Ueck" has also shown his versatility, appearing on "The Tonight Show" and "The Midnight Special" on NBC, as well as "The Superstars" on ABC. Bob, a Milwaukee native, lives with his wife, Judy, in Menomonee Falls.

Sports Director at WISN Radio, the Brewers' flagship station, Dwayne Mosley steps into the No. 2 announcer's chair in 1982 after serving as the No. 3 announcer last season. A native of Darlington, Wisconsin, Mosley came to Milwaukee after serving as the Director of the University of South Dakota Sports Network for two years, handling the broadcasting duties for football and basketball. He was named Wisconsin's small market "Sportscaster of the Year" in 1976 when he was Sports Director of WWIS Radio in Black River Falls. He took over as Sports Director of WXCO Radio in 1977 and handled play-by-play duties for the Wausau Mets. Dwayne makes his home in Milwaukee with his wife, Lora.

KEVIN YOUNG

Some of his special assignments in baseball include working the American League Championship Series in 1978-79 and the USA Network's Thursday Night Baseball two years ago. A versatile announcer, his play-by-play experience also includes college basketball and football, as well as the National Basketball Association. He is single and a native of Carlinville, Illinois.

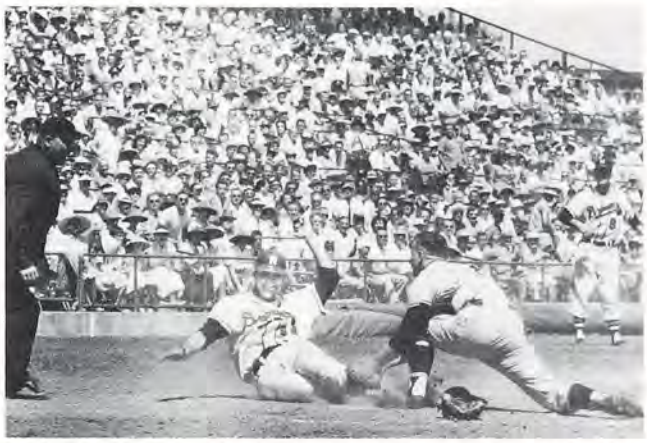
Twenty Five Years Ago "When Milwaukee Stood Atop The Baseball World!"

By Dennis Sell

Milwaukee baseball fans took a nostalgic journey into the past during the summer of 1981 when the NBC radio network rebroadcast the final two games of the 1957 World Series. Can it really be 25 years ago that Milwaukee stood atop the baseball world?

The Times

1957. On the national scene, Dwight Eisenhower began his second term as President. Bill Proxmire trounced former governor Walter Kohler in a special election held to fill the seat of the late Senator Joseph McCarthy. Russia marked the beginning of the space age by launching Spunik I. A first class letter cost 3¢ to mail. Actor Humphrey Bogart died. Federal troops were sent into Little Rock, Arkansas to help in the integration of the public school system. The Civil Rights movement was still several years away.



HE'S IN THERE — Frank Torre, who became the regular first baseman when Joe Adcock broke his leg early in the season, slid into home plate with another Milwaukee run in this picture. Notice the baggy uniforms the players wore and the sun hats the fans in the stands displayed. "Milwaukee Journal Photo"

Locally, Frank Zeidler was Mayor of Milwaukee. Developers advertised three bedroom ranch style homes for $13,900, including the lot. A '57 Plymouth sold for $1,899. Milwaukeeans shopped downtown, on Mitchell Street and other neighborhood shopping strips, and at two new shopping centers, Capitol Court and Southgate. A gallon of milk cost 66¢, ground beef was 39¢ per pound, and cantaloupes sold at 2 for 39¢. The daily Milwaukee Journal cost a nickel.

Milwaukeeans traveled by bus and trolley lines for 20¢ per ride; tickets sold at six for $1 while the weekly pass was $2.25. The #10 Wells route was the only remaining streetcar line still in use. No longer could one take the streetcar to Mitchell and Kinnickinnic, where the "streetcar bent the corner around" to shop "down by Schusters". Famous men's clothing stores advertised all wool worsted suits for under $59. Men's hats, popular during the early and mid-1950's, were gradually fading out of style.

Milwaukee's County Stadium was the nation's newest ballpark. Other National League teams played in quaint old ballparks. Wrigley Field in Chicago, Brooklyn's Ebbets Field, the Polo Grounds in New York. Forbes Field. Connie Mack Stadium. Crosley Field. Busch Stadium.

Earl Gillespie and Blaine Walsh broadcast Milwaukee baseball on radio. Sponsors included Miller Beer and Clark Oil, which featured the memorable "Fisbee and the Chief" commercials. It was the era of Willie, Mickey, and the Duke, and the days of "Stan the Man" Musial and Ted Williams, the "Splendid Splinter".

The major league baseball map stretched as far west as Kansas City in the American League and St. Louis in the National League. Big league baseball would not arrive on the west coast until the following year. Milwaukee would draw 2,215,404, breaking the 2-million barrier for the fourth consecutive year. 1957—the year Milwaukee stood atop the baseball world!

The Season

In the Sporting News pre-season poll, Milwaukee was the pennant favorite over the Brooklyn Dodgers, the legendary Boys of Summer, winners of the National League flag in six of the previous ten years. Milwaukee began the season with essentially the same team as 1956 when they lost the pennant on the final weekend of the season to Duke Snider, Pee Wee Reese, Gil Hodges, Carl Furillo, Roy Campanella, Jackie Robinson, and the rest of the crew from Flatbush.

On the eve of the June 15 trading deadline, however, the team acquired second baseman Red Schoendienst from the New York Giants in exchange for Danny O'Connell, Bobby Thomson, and Ray Crone. Schoendienst solidfied the infield defense and his .300 average provided another potent bat to an already powerful lineup.

WE DID IT! — Jubilant fans celebrated Milwaukee's World Championship well into the night on October 10, 1957. This view looks east on Wisconsin Avenue, between Fifth and Sixth Streets. Note the landmarks — "The Empire Room" of the Schroeder Hotel (now the Marc Plaza); the old Palace Theater; and the marquee of the Wisconsin Theater (now the Cinema I & II). "Milwaukee Journal Photo"

On July 29, a mere 2½ games separated the top five teams — Milwaukee, St. Louis, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, and Cincinnati. In early August, Milwaukee spun together a winning streak while the four other rivals went into a tailspin. Milwaukee snuck into first place for good on August 6 as Warren Spahn defeated the Cincinnati Redlegs.

The team was hard hit by injuries. Joe Adcock fractured his leg on June 23. Billy Bruton tore ligaments on July 11 in a collision with Felix Mantilla and missed the rest of the season. But Milwaukee had a golden touch in coming up with replacements, one of whom was an outfielder by the name of Bob "Hurricane" Hazle, who joined the team on July 28 and proceeded to hit .403 with seven homers in only 134 at bats. With Hank "The Hammer" Aaron and the "Hurricane" leading the way, Milwaukee cycloned its way into an eight game lead in mid-September.

Now it was no longer a matter of if, but when. The date — September 23; the place — Milwaukee County Stadium. At 11:34 P.M. Henry Aaron slammed an 11th inning homer into "Perini's Woods" off the Cardinals' Billy Muffett to clinch the flag. Jubilant teammates carried "The Hammer" off the field.

The team featured a unique blend of power and pitching. Aaron hit .322 with 44 homers and 132 RBI's and was named the league's Most Valuable Player. Eddie Mathews slammed 32 homers and drove in 94 runs. Cy Young Award winner Warren Spahn won 21 and lost 11. Bob Buhl was 18-7 and Lou Burdette 17-9. Fred Haney was named manager of the year.

The Series

Milwaukee entered the '57 World Series with high hopes against the favored New York Yankees. The teams split the first two games in the "Big Apple," as Whitey Ford and Burdette exchanged wins.

In the first World Series game ever played in County Stadium, the Yankees trounced Milwaukee 12-3 as Bay View native and '57 A.L. rookie of the year, Tony Kubek, belted two homers. In game four, Milwaukee led the Yankees 4-1 behind Warren Spahn. But Elston Howard hit a three run homer in the ninth inning to tie the game. The Yanks pushed across a run in the tenth to take the lead. A New York win would give the Bronx Bombers a commanding 3-1 lead.

But on this day dame fortune was on Milwaukee's side. Yankee hurler Tommy Byrne fired a low inside fastball at pinch hitter Nippy Jones. Plate umpire Augie Donatelli called the pitch a ball. Jones asked the umpire to examine the baseball. A large black mark, shoe polish, appeared on the ball proving that Jones had been hit by the pitch. This decision provided the spark for a Milwaukee comeback. A double by Johnny Logan tied the game and set the stage for Eddie Mathews' dramatic two run homer over the right field wall to give Milwaukee a come from behind 7-5 win.

Lou Burdette shut out the Yankees in the pivotal fifth game to put Milwaukee within one game of the championship. The Yankees evened the series with a 4-2 win in game six and the series shifted back to the "House That Ruth Built". Warren Spahn came down with the flu so Burdette was pressed into service with only two days rest to oppose Don "Perfect Game" Larsen in the deciding seventh game. Four runs in the third and an eighth inning Del Crandall homer gave Lou all the runs he needed. Burdette's shutout and third win of the series was completed when Eddie Mathews fielded Bill Skowren's sharply hit bases loaded ground ball and stepped on third base for the final out. At 1:35 P.M. Milwaukee time on Thursday, October 10, Milwaukee was crowned "World Champions!"

The Aftermath

In every corner of the city, from Prospect Avenue to Highway 100, from Fond du Lac Avenue to Forest Home Avenue, from Capitol Drive to Lincoln Avenue, from Bay View to Sherman Park, from Whitefish Bay to Wauwatosa, joy reigned supreme in the "city of neighborhoods". The state of Wisconsin reveled in the glory as many of the daily newspapers proclaimed the win with front page banner headlines. But the celebration was clearly centered in downtown Milwaukee.

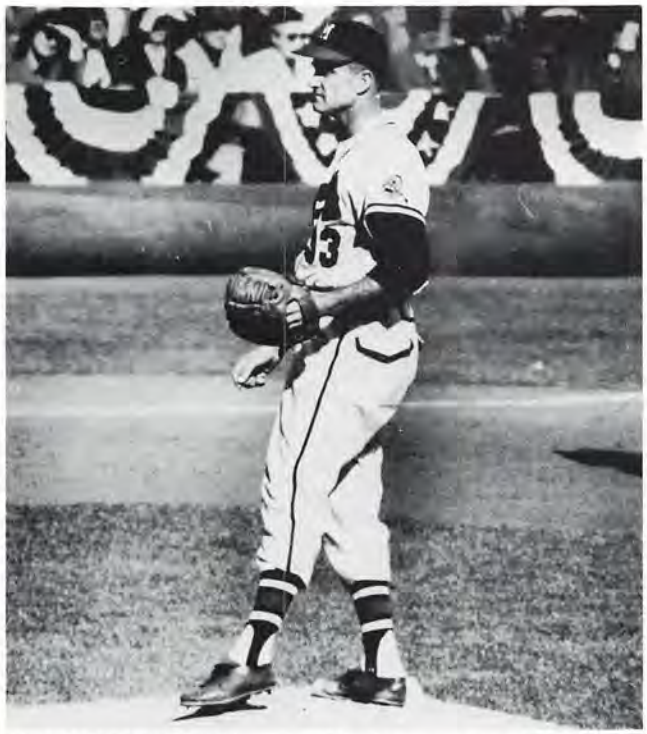
Crowds began forming on Wisconsin Avenue immediately after the final out was recorded. People sang, screamed, and snake danced through the street. The crowd grew, reaching a peak of 225,000 at 9:00 P.M. It was New Year's Eve and V-E Day all rolled into one. Fans carried signs which included "Burdette for President", "Mathews for Vice President" and "Bushville Wins!"

Another 150,000 lined the streets for the motorcade carrying the team from Mitchell Field to County Stadium. Due to the pandemonium, the motorcade was forced to take an alternate route.

Where Are They Now?

Many of the players are still associated with organized baseball. Warren Spahn had served as a minor league pitching coach with the Angels. Mathews, the "Brookfield Bomber", scouts for Oakland. Del Crandall manages the Dodgers' AAA farm club at Albuquerque and quietly prays for a managerial position in the majors.

THE BROOKFIELD BOMBER — Eddie Mathews, now a scout with the Oakland A's, hit 32 homers and drove in 84 runs in 1957, making the final putout of the World Series. "Milwaukee Journal Photo"



WORLD SERIES HERO — Lew Burdette won three World Series games in 1957, including the clincher on October 10. "Milwaukee Journal Photo"

Del Rice is a Giants' scout. After leading the Cardinals to the world title in 1967, Red Schoendienst coaches for St. Louis. Hall of Famer Henry Aaron, of course, holds a front office position in Atlanta. Carl Sawatski is president of the Texas League. Wes Covington serves as the promotions director for the Edmonton Trappers of the Pacific Coast League. "Hurricane" Hazle lives in South Carolina.

Frank Torre holds an executive position with Rawlings Sporting Goods. Adcock, the "Coushatta Clubber", lives in his hometown of Coushatta, Louisiana. Burdette works in public relations for a cable T.V. firm in Atlanta. Johnny Logan still lives in Milwaukee. Billy Bruton resides in the Detroit area, while Pafko lives in Chicago. George Blanchard, a bat boy, is now athletic director at Brown Deer High School.

Pitchers Bob Trowbridge, Phil Paine, and Dave Jolly have passed away as has Coach Charley Root, Team President Lew Perini and General Manager John Quinn.

Milwaukee County Stadium, while still a fine facility, is now the eighth oldest park in the majors. Only Boston's Fenway Park, Briggs Stadium in Detroit, Comisky Park and Wrigley Field in Chicago, Yankee Stadium, and parks in Cleveland and Baltimore are older. Most of the other teams play in ultramodern, multipurpose stadiums, which frequently lack the charm of the older parks.

Twenty-five years ago, such names as the "Hammer", "Brookfield Bomber", Coushatta Clubber", "Spahnie", and "Yatcha" were on every Milwaukee and Wisconsin fans' lips. Today players like "Stormin Gorman", "Coop", "Rockin Robin", and "Benji" are household names around the city and state. Today's Brewers will be fighting to capture the crown that their counterparts won in 1957 — the year that Milwaukee stood atop the baseball world!

THE 1st PLAYOFF TEAM IN MILWAUKEE BREWER HISTORY

The past four seasons the Milwaukee Brewers have been one of the top four teams in baseball. Only the Baltimore Orioles (.351-236/.598) and New York Yankees (351-241/.593) in the American League and Cincinnati Reds (337-255/.569) in the National League have compiled a better record than the Brewers' 336-259, .566 winning percentage. Since 1978 the Brewers have finished third, second and third, before finishing with the best overall mark in the Eastern Division last year. Their second half championship qualified them for the Eastern Divisional Series — their first playoff berth in the fanchise's twelve year history. The team that provided Milwaukee fans with that "first" and the subsequent playoff performance, are etched forever on these two pages. Although their valiant come-from-behind efforts fell inches short, most Brewer officials, players and fans feel the 1981 playoffs were not the end of a good season, but instead "only the beginning" of better things to come.

THE SCOREBOARD

After four months of installation time, the scoreboard at Milwaukee County Stadium began operation Opening Day, 1980. Located in right-center field and measuring 86′ high by 94′ wide, it is one of the most sophisticated of its type in the world. The video matrix measures 29′ high by 63′ wide, making it the world's largest matrix screen. The matrix consists of 30,720 40-watt light bulbs arranged in 120 rows by 256 columns. The light bulbs have the capacity for 16 shades of gray, thereby creating a sharp image on the screen. The system is controlled by 2 computers and utilizes between six to eight operators.

The video matrix can handle live action, replays, slow motion, animations and a variety of statistical information such as out of town scores and game in progress information. The system has the capability to accept video from a number of sources including slides, still photos, films, video cassettes and direct feeds from scoreboard field cameras, the broadcasting television truck and local television stations.

In addition, two auxiliary scoreboards located on the mezzanine level left and right field extensions, measure 5′ high by 143′ long and continuously display game in progress information and out of town scores.

The system was manufactured by Omega Electronics of Switzerland and was installed by Poblocki and Sons Sign Company. The electrical installation was done by McGaw Electric Company.
